SPL Systems Bolsters Inventory With EAW UX8800 Dual-Mode Digital Processors, KF730 Series Line Arrays

Whitinsville, MA – October 25, 2007 - New England-based sound company SPL Systems recently added dual EAW UX8800 dual-mode digital processors with Gunness Focusing, as well as 12 EAW KF730 small line array modules, to its live system inventory.

Located in West Springfield, Massachusetts and founded/owned by Bill Forbes, SPL Systems has been providing full production services for live concert performances, corporate events, fairs, festivals, and event promoters throughout New England for more than a decade. The company also performs top-notch system installation and integration services.

“The UX8800 processors and KF730 line arrays further expand the scope of sound system services that we’re able to supply to our growing live and concert customer base,” states Forbes. “In fact, these components have been working almost non-stop in a wide variety of applications since we took delivery of them.”

SPL Systems is a member of ELAN (EAW Line Array Network), a valuable association network provided by the company that allows members to promote their inventories as well as secure additional EAW inventory when needed. The UX8800 and KF Series line arrays join a wide range of other EAW components utilized by SPL Systems, including KF850z, LA400, FR129z, UB2199 and JF80z loudspeakers.
